Judy Collins (b. 1939) is an American singer, songwriter, and guitarist whose music has spanned multiple genres including folk, country, pop, and rock and roll. She has recorded 36 studio albums, and numerous live and compilation albums. Collins was a piano prodigy before switching to guitar after being inspired by folk musicians Woody Guthrie and Pete Seeger. She released her debut album A Maid of Constant Sorrow in 1961, releasing six more albums during the 1960s. Her cover of Joni Mitchell's "Both Sides, Now" won her a Grammy Award for Best Folk Recording in 1969.
